

Healius Limited
Code of Conduct

1. Introduction

1.1 Who does this Policy apply to?

This Policy applies to all directors, employees, contractors and temporary staff of Healius Limited and its related bodies corporate (together, the Healius Group) (Staff Members).

1.2 What does this Policy cover?

This Code of Conduct sets out the principles by which Healius directors and employees will conduct business.

This Code of Conduct should be enacted in word and spirit by all Healius directors, employees, contractors and professionals who have a business association with Healius.

2. Compliance with the Law and Regulations

All Healius representatives must comply with the laws that govern Australian and international operations. In the event employees have concerns about legal issues, legal advice must be sought before any decision is taken.

It is a governing principle that Healius be operated in accordance with the legal (and cultural) standards appropriate to each country in which it has a presence.

3. Corporate Integrity and Social Responsibility

All representatives of Healius must at all times strive to conduct themselves with honesty and integrity. This may in certain circumstances require a higher standard of conduct than that required by law. The conduct of Healius staff must be to a standard, which meets community expectations of organisations comparable with Healius, including standards related to environmental and social responsibility.

Any employee who believes activities may reflect poorly on Healius should advise an appropriate manager.

4. Conflicts of Interest

Employees have a duty of good faith and fidelity to Healius.

Employees wishing to be involved in the management or board of another organisation must advise and seek approval from the Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer prior to accepting or continuing in any such role.

Representatives of Healius who are members of a profession should uphold the ethics and integrity of their profession, but must be mindful not to act in conflict with Healius when representing their profession.

Employees should not use their Healius position for personal or community interests unless authorised by Healius. Employees should not use their position for political interests at any time.

5. Maintaining Information Privacy and Confidentiality

The security and proper use of customer and patient information is mandatory, and rights to privacy must be observed. Employees must exercise care in conversation outside Healius and must not use customer or other confidential information for improper purposes.

The directors and employees of Healius must respect the confidentiality of information about business partners and fellow employees. Where Healius employees are entrusted with confidential information, this information must be securely stored and properly managed, and not disclosed to any third parties, unless required by law.

An employee's obligations of confidentiality and privacy continue even after the employee has left employment with Healius.

6. Copyright

The unauthorised duplication or use of copyrighted material violates the law and is contrary to Healius' standards of conduct and business practice.

7. Action within Delegated Authority

Each director and employee of Healius has a level of authority within which they can act, and managers have a responsibility to inform all employees of the limits of their authority. When uncertain of their authority, or of the applicability of company policy, employees should seek clarification before acting on behalf of Healius.

8. Use of Systems

Healius has a number of business systems in place to help it operate effectively. These systems must be used for their intended purpose only. Unauthorised use will be treated seriously. For example, private passwords to computer files should remain private, and unauthorised access to confidential information is prohibited.

The maintenance of security processes and adherence to business standards are essential to the long-term integrity of the systems and protection of confidentiality for customers and employee data.

9. Inside Information

Healius is listed on the Australian Securities Exchange ("ASX") and has an obligation to keep the ASX informed of any matter, which may affect its share price. Directors and employees of Healius must not use unpublished information about Healius or its business counterparties for personal gain.

The Trading in Securities Policy reminds staff that it is illegal for any person to trade in Healius' securities at a time when he or she possesses non-public information which, if disclosed publicly, would be likely to materially affect the market price of Healius' securities. That policy also regulates when employees and their families can trade in Healius shares.

It is illegal to disclose confidential and sensitive information for the purpose of personal gain (including communicating non-public price sensitive information to another person for the purpose of that person trading in Healius' shares).

10. Improper Benefits

Directors and employees of Healius must not accept payments, gifts or entertainment beyond that which is considered as normal business practice. If any such benefit is offered or received that could be construed by others as improper, the benefit should be reported to an appropriate manager. Staff Members may refer to the Gifts and Entertainment Policy for more detail.

11. Misappropriation

Directors and employees of Healius must not misuse funds or property, nor assist others to do so. Where employees are found to be involved in misappropriation, disciplinary action will be taken and may result in the matter being notified to the Police. Staff Members may refer to the Anti-bribery and anti-fraud Policy for more detail.

12. Conduct within the Workplace

Directors and employees of Healius have a responsibility to maintain the highest levels of professional conduct in their interactions with colleagues, business partners and in representing Healius in the community. Employees must maintain business relationships in a manner which is consistent with the principles of respect for others, integrity and fairness and which meet, as a minimum, the laws applicable to behaviour in the work environment.

All forms of discrimination and harassment are prohibited.

13. Political Activities

As an organisation, Healius is politically impartial.

14. Code of Conduct Breaches
